

BOB MAKES BREAKFAST

FADE IN:

INT. KITCHEN - DAY

The clock on the stove turns to 9:01. Silence. A CRASH reverberates from upstairs. THUMPS pass through the ceiling. A door SLAMS and feet THUD downstairs. BOB, 28, bursts into the room in a dress shirt with a tie over his shoulders.

BOB
No, no, no, no.

He grabs a pan from the sink, puts it on the stove and spins the burner knob. Two eggs crack above the pan and yolks drop in. Bob's phone BUZZES underneath clutter on the table.

BOB (CONT'D)
I know, I know! Shut up!

Bob throws mail and papers from the table to locate his phone, he grabs it and answers.

BOB (CONT'D)
This is Robert.

Bob opens a cabinet and grabs a bowl.

BOB (CONT'D)
Yes, sir. I am walking through the doors right now.

Bob fills the bowl with cereal and milk.

BOB (CONT'D)
What's that? Oh, that's just security enjoying a late breakfast.

Bob mutes his phone and shoves a large spoonful in his mouth. He chews fast, gulps it down and unmutes the phone.

BOB (CONT'D)
I have a matter I need to tend to before I can stop by your office. It should only take a minute or thirty.

Bob attempts to tie his tie.

BOB (CONT'D)
Yes, sir. As soon as I'm finished.

Bob ends the call. He sniffs the air and turns around to see the frying pan fully ablaze.

WRITERS
(best practices)

In this competition time and space are of the essence. Here are a few tips to write efficiently and compactly.

DO:

Write in active voice. She isn't sitting, she sits.
Eliminating those 3 (or more) letters can save you lines.

Be specific without overwriting.

If you set something up, pay it off.

DON'T:

Adjust your margins or font to make room, that's a DQ.

Use camera directions, just describe the scene.

Sparingly if at all use parentheticals or transitional elements. That is all wasted space.

Include details that do not affect the characters or story.
